WESLEYAN FEVER: A Case Study

Registration is hub of excitement and activity.

Three Edgecombe Freshmen move into their dorm rooms.

Returning students streamed out of automobiles gripping suitcases, ragged book bags, and last year's dog-eared Talking Heads Posters. They clapped each other's backs and shrieked hellos over the too-loud music that identified already occupied rooms. Freshmen students stumbled from family station wagons, followed closely by Mom and Dad porting endless bags of school supplies and munchies. The year, it seemed, had begun as any other at Wesleyan.

Wesleyan Fever: Once You

Derek Francis and member of Rocky Mount community enjoy a run around Wesleyan's sprawling grounds.

But as days passed, students, faculty, and staff members began to notice something different, something that made this year at Wesleyan different from all the rest. Freshmen enrollment was up over 35 percent. The throngs of spirited freshmen, roving wide-eyed about the Wesleyan campus, could not help but add excitement to the feverish pitch of activity that traditionally characterizes the orientation and registration period.

Clockwise: Mark Immler participates in Airband Contest. Gretchen Landshoff enjoys a stroll across one of Wesleyan's soccer fields. Anita Bailey, Krystal Crutchfield, and Beth Hodsdon take time out for fun.

Students were signing up for participation in student activities in record numbers. Phi Beta Lambda, the business honorary could boast a big membership increase over last year. And these were only a few of the symptoms of the strange and wonderful fever that had begun to spread on the Wesleyan campus.

Whitney Houston Imitator

Tamara Oates thrills audience with her Whitney Houston imitation.

So what's an airband? That's a reasonable question. But how reasonable is the answer? An airband is a group of vocalists who don't sing; it's a group of musicians who don't play. So what do they do? They pretend. And this year Wesleyan saw some of the greatest "pretenders" ever to appear in a lip sync contest at Wesleyan.

"This was the third time to have a lip sync at Wesleyan and, overall, the whole show was more professionally done," said Dorothy Phiefer, Director of Student Activities. "This year, for the first time at Wesleyan, we had Gordon Finney, General Manager of WRMT Radio, to serve as MC. And the groups were better prepared. They looked as if they'd really spent some time practicing and putting together costumes."

The contestants are judged on their appearance, originality, and on lip sync. They can receive one to ten points in each category. Cash prizes of $50.00 for first place and $25.00 for second place are awarded to the top acts.

Tamara Oates, posing as Whitney Houston singing "How Will I Know," walked away with the $50.00 for first place. Second place went to Alpha Delta Chi.

Two party goers relax between dances.

A little glitz? A little glamour? Certainly it was a gala event for those gathered at the Sheraton on the evening of October 14 to celebrate Homecoming's grand finale, the Homecoming dance and the crowning of the Homecoming Queen.

The band, Mirrors, electrified the audience with selections from the 70's to the 80's. Finally at 11:00 came the high point of the evening, the introduction of the Homecoming Court and their escorts.

Representing the freshman class were Gabrielle Griffis escorted by Jeff Schimbeno, Talita Irizaay escorted by Gerald Horton, and Gretchen Landshoff escorted by Chris Bratcher.

Representing the sophomore class were Krystal Crutchfield escorted by David Ferrell, Beth Hodsdon escorted by Eric Schreiber, and Lesley Freeman escorted by Dave Gruver.

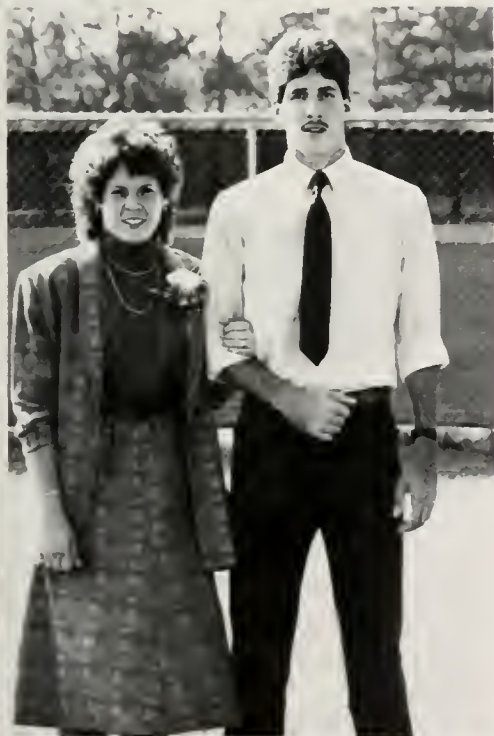

Libby Birdsong and Kenny Bulkin move to dance floor.

ENVIRONMENT

- North Carolina Wesleyan College Campus
- Environment in which subjects were studied is estimated to be that in which subjects spend 60% - 70% of their time.
- Variables examined within the environment include particular locales, individual student subjects, and certain special events which appear to be followed by large outbreaks of Wesleyan Fever.

Dorms Provide Living, Learning

Did we ever imagine sharing a home with over a hundred other people? Students in Nash, North, Edgcombe, and South dorms do just that.

Wesleyan students find sharing their habitat with such a large variety of people as both an exciting and educational experience. Junior Cindy Harrell finds dorm life enjoyable because "there is always someone around to talk with." Senior Mark Immler views his experience in Nash dorm as "an opportunity to learn how to live and work with others." He adds, "living in the dorm has given me an added sense of responsibility."

Residence halls at Wesleyan are designed to provide a dynamic environment where students not only live together, but learn and grow together. To enhance the social and educational backgrounds of students, the resident directors and student life office provide parties, speakers, movies, and more for each dorm. When asked how he enjoyed dorm parties, freshman Danny Murphy said, "Since the college enforces the 21 year old drinking law, I don't usually attend dorm parties." Various speakers, such as resident assistants or the campus nurse, have addressed students in the dorms this year. Topics have varied from serious subjects like self defense and birth control, to lighter topics like exercising and makeup.

Changes have been made this year in the residence halls to satisfy some of the different perceptions students at Wesleyan have about what dorm life should be. Open house policies have been relaxed; visiting students may now sign themselves in and not go through an R.A. To improve dorm safety, fire alarm systems have been installed in each dorm. Junior RA Derek Edwards admits, "The fire alarm system is an improvement for ensuring student safety, as long as students aren't tampering with them to cause false alarms."

RA's Enforce Dorm Policies,

Terry Hardison and Pam Wooten during RA training.

Mike Walters checks with Denise Flood for messages.

"When students have a problem or want someone to chat with, whom can they go to?" RESIDENT ASSISTANTS. Pam Derrick, Director of Housing, sees the RA's main function as "a contact person between students and student life to assist in all the phases of service Wesleyan has to offer." One of the resident assistant's responsibilities is enforcing dorm policies, but senior RA Lisa Nelson and junior RA Kori Townsend see their responsibilities as a "counselor for students." They believe their primary duty as RA is helping students adjust to dorm life. Kori said, "I don't feel like I am here to have to enforce rules; students should learn to do that themselves."

Four resident assistants for each dorm are selected by the resident directors, the director of housing, and the dean of student life through an interview selection process. They are paid a straight salary, depending on their years of service. As a special privilege, RA's receive a private room for the price of a double room.

This year, resident assistants are on duty from their rooms rather than from the lobby. Senior RA George Morse thinks this change "puts the RA's closer to what is really going on. Some people are in the lobby, but most students can be found on the floors. Since we are in our rooms, it is very convenient and easy for students to find us."

To many students, resident assistants are their link for effective communication in the residence halls. Senior RA Thomas Taylor claims, "At first I think most students decide to be RA's for the money, but then they stay with the job because of the experience and the opportunity it offers for helping others."

Students Fill Leisure

When NC Wesleyan students have leisure time, what do they do? Students may visit the gymnasium to lift weights, jog a mile around campus, or participate in intramural sports. Less physical students may "catch a nap" between classes after a late night study session or hangout with friends in the dorms.

When students wish to get off campus, they drive to the local malls and restaurants. The opening of new Golden East Mall last August offers students more places to visit and more job opportunities. Taking advantage of the new openings in the mall, junior Tamara Oates uses her spare time productively by working as a salesclerk in the Limited. The new Sheraton, which opened last summer became a popular entertainment spot for those Wesleyan students who are 21 years old.

Being located outside the city limits, the Wesleyan campus can be quite tranquil. Senior Diane Ciasca finds the Wesleyan campus inviting because "the tranquil environment adds to the beauty of the campus."

If students do not wish to participate in organizations or activities, they may use the student union facilities to play a video game or watch the large screen television. Students can eat in Doc's snackbar or do some shopping at the bookstore.

Junior Cindy Harrell believes "opportunities on campus are available if students take advantage of them. The campus is like our own little community."

Peeper Incident Leads to

"Perv Alert," the subject line of a recent memo elicited chuckles as well as concern from students on the North Carolina Wesleyan campus.

A rash of peeping tom incidents in the women's dorms during November led to tightened security as well as a safety awareness campaign among students and administration. The college hired additional security guards and regular campus security was "beefed up" according to Dean of Student Life Dr. Carleton McKita.

On November 19, as reports that the peeper was on campus began to spread, students mobilized carrying baseball bats, umbrellas, and whatever else they could lay their hands on and began their own search of the woods on campus. Camera crews and reporters from local television stations streamed onto the campus, after receiving a call from some concerned students.

The peeper had been seen for the first time on November 10, when he wandered into the women's showers in North Dorm and exposed himself.

NCWC Students Make It Happen With Career Planning/Co-Op Education

Students at N.C. Wesleyan are "making it happen" by participating in the Career Planning/Cooperative Education Program. The program provides services and activities which are designed to meet the varied Career Planning needs of individual students. Whether a freshman who is indecisive about the choice of an academic major or minor, or a senior investigating graduate schools, the Career Planning/Cooperative Education Program can provide assistance and guidance for developing effective career plans.

Players Perform Equus Fall Term

North Carolina Wesleyan no longer offers a theatre major. But Director Chuck Ackerman said he'd had a larger turnout for auditions for the fall production than ever before. The large turnout, allowed the theatre department to do a large show like Equus which requires a cast of fifteen. Ackerman admits, "It was a real delight having that many try out."

Peter Shaffer's Equus is a thrilling drama that takes place in Rokeby Psychiatric Hospital in Southern England. The time is the present.

The only props used in Equus were horse-heads made out of heavy wire, covered with wire mesh; they were rented from a high school in Peabody, Massachusetts.

Equus, a modern, serious kind of drama, is not the kind of play usually performed at D. S. Coltrane Theatre. Ackerman remarked, "I believe this kind of play was good for the school and for the students who participated." Ackerman directed the play which ran from November 5-8, 1986.

When six players did not return to the team and expected recruits did not show, second year volleyball coach Diane Scherzer had to rebuild her team. She credits junior setter Debbie Ward for "running the offense" for the team. Coach Scherzer adds "junior Sharon Fitzpatrick's hitting ability helped highlight the team's effort." Senior Lori Blackburn, who sat out of competition for two seasons, brought back some much needed experience. Finishing 4 - 25, the players strived together throughout the season.

After a shaky 2-3 start, North Carolina Wesleyan roared to its best season ever with a 24-7 record, a Dixie Conference championship and an NCAA quarterfinal finish.

First-year coach Bill Chambers juggled a number of starting lineups for the Bishops early in the season before settling down with the right mix of veterans and young players.

Two players were named to the 1st Team All-Dixie Conference squad: Lloyd Watts, a senior from Fredericksburg, Va., and Chris Bratcher, a sophomore from Richmond, Va. Watts led the Bishops in scoring with a 19.3 average while Bratcher was scoring at a 16.8 clip.

Midway through the 86-87 season, the Bishops were a respectable 7-5. However, with a stable lineup and some fine play, the Bishops reeled off a 12-1 winning mark to end the regular season at 19-6.

In the Dixie Conference Tournament, N.C. Wesleyan rolled through three games with a 74-70 win over UNC-Greensboro, the clincher.

In NCAA play, the Bishops captured the South Regional with a pair of clutch two-point games over Centre College, Ken., and Washington Univeristy, Mo. The Bishops final 8 status marked the best season ever for the Bishops, and the first time a Dixie Conference school had won the NCAA South Regional.

For the Bishops, the future looks even brighter with Chambers going into his second year as head coach and the Bishops returning some key members of the memorable 86-87 squad.

Cheerleaders Worked Hard to

Cheerleading began early this year for some of the squad. Just before school started this year, Lesley Freeman, Dianne Ciasca, and Suzanne Payne attended the Universal Cheerleading Association Camp which was held at Virginia Tech. Within the week, they learned many new cheers, chants, and stunt techniques. At the end of the week, they were awarded five blue ribbons and two red ribbons. The girls also won the spirit stick and brought back a trophy for the Most Improved Squad.

The squad started practicing in September this year and didn't stop until the end of February. They spent many long hours learning new dance routines and perfecting difficult stunts. And they tried to promote more school spirit by having the school's first pep rally to begin the men's basketball season.

Promote Spirit in '86-'87

At competition time, the girls placed third. But their season wasn't over. The cheerleaders accompanied the men's basketball team to the NCAA South Regional Tournament, which was held in St. Louis, then followed the team on to Springfield, Ohio.

After Disappointing Seasons

The North Carolina Wesleyan tennis team rebounded after a number of disappointing seasons, with the Bishops posting a 5-10 overall record.

The Bishops, under first-year coach Randy Wheelless, downed three Division II squads during the season. N.C. Wesleyan's five wins were as many as the squad has won in the last three years put together.

No. 1 player Barry Nethercutt led the charge for the Bishops with a .500 record in singles. Nethercutt, a senior, was selected to the 2nd Team Coaches Select squad by the Dixie Conference.

At Wesleyan—Athletics

If a Wesleyan student does not belong to one of the intercollegiate teams, other athletic opportunities are available. Students may do individual workouts in the weight room, shoot basketball in the gym, jog around the campus, or cycle into town. Or, they might play a match of tennis with a friend.

The intramurals program, directed by Jim Bennington, offers athletic opportunities to students wishing to participate in team sports. The intramurals teams, which are co-ed, are open to every Wesleyan student; the only requirement is that a team roster must be filled out. Football, softball, basketball, volleyball are the team sports offered. Individual competition includes tennis, ping-pong, and pool. Facilities available for intramurals are open fields in front of the dorms, tennis courts, the recreation room, and the gymnasium.

All students are encouraged to participate in as many intramural activities as they wish.

Chambers Comes to Wesleyan

Bill Chambers comes to Wesleyan as basketball coach, from Dudley High in Greensboro, NC. During his five years in Greensboro, Chambers led Dudley High to two North Central Conference championships. He was named Coach of the Year twice during that time.

As a player, at Greensboro's Grimsley High, Chambers was named one of the top 10 seniors in the nation in 1972.

During his four years at the University of North Carolina, Chambers played under Dean Smith, serving as captain of the Tar Heels his senior season.

From 1977-79 Chambers played for and later coached the Pepinster Professional Basketball Club in Belgium and in 1979 he played for the Ensival Basketball Club—also in Belgium.

Chambers returned to the U.S. and began coaching J.V. at Greensboro's Grimsley High. In 1981 he took a job as head coach at Greensboro's Dudley High.

Chambers replaces Jeff Reynolds as head coach of the Bishops.

Chambers confers with team at half.

Student/Community Talent

Name Change Dropped

The Dissenter staff of 1986-87, headed by editor Johnny Francis, did its best to make this year's yearbook the best ever. Under the leadership of a new advisor, Mrs. Margaret Ledbetter, the yearbook staff was able to gain fresh ideas on the production of a good yearbook. This is the first year that an advisor has been hired, on a consulting basis, to oversee the production of the yearbook. Kathy Naraine served as chief copy writer, writing some 80% of the copy for this edition of the Dissenter. Johnny Francis, in addition to his duties as editor, served as chief photographer, taking nearly 85% of the book's pictures.

Early in the year, the Dissenter staff debated the idea of changing the name of the yearbook; many students believed that "Dissenter" had a negative connotation. After receiving opposition from both faculty and staff, the students decided to reconsider the move toward changing the name. The staff decided that if the name "Dissenter" was an important tradition to members in the Wesleyan community, the tradition should be preserved. The idea was dropped.

To help finance and promote this edition of the Dissenter, the yearbook staff revived an old practice of selling ads to the Rocky Mount community. The staff enlisted the aid of Phi Beta Lambda, the business honorary, for the sale of ads. Students in the organization, led by President George Morse, sold ads to local businesses to raise money for the production of a successful yearbook.

Fritz Named Acting President;

Each year North Carolina Wesleyan College students and staff produce a new edition of the Dissenter to capture something of the vitality, purpose and spirit of the college. This year's annual is an important issue because of the transition in the president's office. On June 30, 1986, Dr. S. Bruce Petteway retired and I assumed the duties of Acting President. The challenge put before the college was one of maintaining its momentum and not allowing the college to fall into some sort of holding pattern until a permanent president is named.

From my personal perspective, I believe the college and its students have fared very well. Students, faculty, and staff began the 1986-87 academic year with considerable optimism. Thus far, there have been few disappointments. Our optimism was buoyed considerably by the significant upturn in enrollment which is an important endorsement of the college's mission, programs, and faculty. The team-spirit exhibited by faculty and staff has been most gratifying. Clearly, we are working for a common purpose and common desire, to see North Carolina Wesleyan College and its students prosper.

Earlier in the year, I said that I did not promise a quick-fix but offered instead to build on our solid foundation a college which is determined to fulfill its mission. Throughout the year, our efforts have been reinforced by a vitality which has permeated virtually every facet of our existence. Greater attention is being given to program support and the development of new ways to make our programs more effective, beneficial, and attractive to our students.

There is much more that we want, and need to do to continue to improve our college. Certainly, we want to continue to be ambitious, to be eager to grow and prosper, and to build on the gains we have made this year. As one reviews the pages that follow, I think the vitality of North Carolina Wesleyan College will be apparent. I should like to extend my personal thanks to the entire Wesleyan College Community for its support and to the staff of the Dissenter for the production of this fine college annual.

Triangle East Comes to

Students and faculty alike twittered in genuine excitement when they caught glimpses of former governor Jim Hunt on the Wesleyan campus. Former Gov. Hunt presided at the meeting of Triangle East, a syndicate of business and professional people from Wilson, Rocky Mount, Zebulon triangle.

The concept that Triangle East is busy promoting involves recruiting industry complimentary to industry that is already in place in the Research Triangle. The industries being recruited would manufacture items needed in the production or packaging of items currently manufactured in the Research Triangle. Hunt is the president of this board and has, according to Richard Dollar, Vice-President in charge of Development at Wesleyan, "spear-headed the whole project."

"Buck" Leonard Honored at

Most folks at Wesleyan love tradition. Tradition lends color and depth; it brings a certain richness to most every facet of the college's life. And Founder's Day at Wesleyan is not the least among a long list of great traditions. It is, in fact, a time for celebrating tradition at Wesleyan.

In his Founder's Day address, Dr. Thomas Collins, President of Wesleyan College, 1959-1975, challenged all who were present to continue their support for liberal arts education. Dr. Collins served as Wesleyan's first president.

The College paid special tribute to past president Dr. Bruce Petteway, unveiling a portrait of Dr. Petteway that will hang in the Trustee's Room next to the portrait of the first president of Wesleyan.

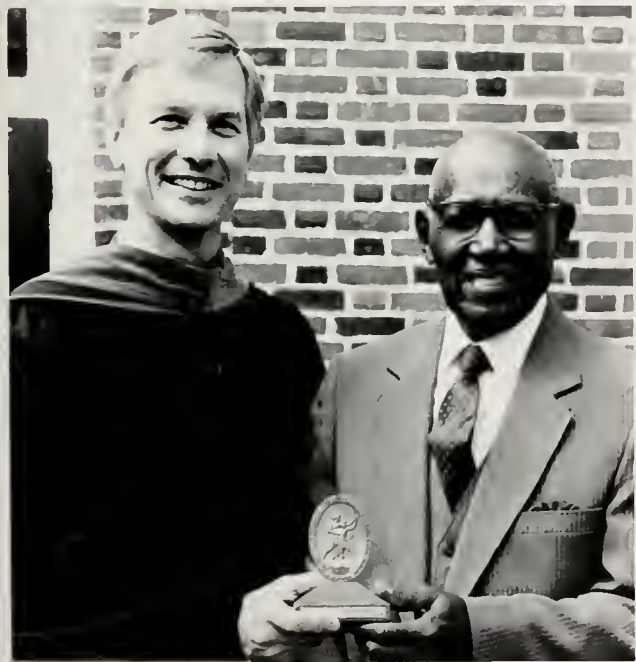

Service awards, honoring years of service at Wesleyan, were presented to: Sophia Bridges, Vickie Faircloth, and Susan Morris, Five-year Awards; William Barrett, Paul DeGategno, Ray Kirkland, Mary Yarborough, 10-Year Awards; David Jones, 15-Year Award; Curtis Batchelor, Lionel Bishop, Corbitt Rushing, and Rexford Tucker, 20-Year Awards; and Orris Dumas, 30-Year Award.

The high-point of the convocation was the presentation of the Algernon Sidney Sullivan Award, presented to Walter Fenner "Buck" Leonard. The award is presented to one student and one community person each year. Recipients are chosen on the basis of their excellence of character and their service to humanity.

Nuclear Proliferation:

"What is it that we really fear that pushes us to stock pile these nuclear weapons, which we know could lead to our own destruction?" The question, posed timidly and preceded by the modest disclaimer, "I know this is a silly, simple question," is anything but silly or simple. It is, perhaps, the very question that compelled some 75 persons from the surrounding area to venture from their homes on a cold, rainy morning in November to attend a day-long conference, sponsored by NC Wesleyan, devoted to examining the United Methodist Council of Bishop's document calling for a halt to nuclear proliferation.

The conference, sponsored by Wesleyan and supported by a grant from United Methodist Higher Education, was held in the Leon Russell Chapel on November 15, from 8:30 am to 5:30 pm. The focus of the conference was a Foundation Document, prepared by the United Methodist Council of Bishops, and titled "In Defense of Creation: The Nuclear Crisis and Just Peace." Speakers for the conference were: Robert T. Osborne, Professor of Religion at Duke University, speaking on the Biblical foundations for peace; Stanley Hauerwas, professor Theological Ethics at Duke University, speaking on the pacifist tradition; David Steinmetz, professor of Church History and Doctrine at Duke University, speaking on the just war tradition; Elbert Wethington, Professor Emeritus at Lebanon Valley College, speaking on the nuclear challenge to faith; and John Hildreth, Executive Director for Common Cause in Texas, speaking on policies for a just peace.

The event, open to anyone, drew faculty members and students as well as ministers and lay people from many area churches. Faculty and students from Wesleyan participated in organizing the conference.

Watson Named Jefferson-Pilot Professor of 1987

Dr. Richard L. Watson III, associate professor of history at Wesleyan, has been named the Jefferson-Pilot Professor of 1987.

As part of the Professorship, Watson received a small cash award and use of a personal computer and software, provided by the college.

Watson came to Wesleyan in 1972. A scholar specializing in the history of South Africa, Watson spent last year on sabbatical leave doing research in Cape Town. His article, "Slavery and Ideology: the South African Case" is due to be published in the International Jour- nal of African Historical Studies. He has also written biographical notes on Anton Lembede and Desmond Tutu for the Encyclopedia of World Biography. He is currently working on a book on the abolition of slavery in South Africa in the 19th century.

The Jefferson-Pilot program is made possible by a grant from the Jefferson-Pilot Corporation. The Professorship at Wesleyan was established in 1982. Criteria for the appointment include teaching excellence, scholarship, and commitment to Wesleyan.

Wesleyan Fever: A Case Study

The research conducted here has been done in an effort to discover the causes and the nature of a fever that has infected and continues to infect students, faculty, and staff on the North Carolina Wesleyan campus.

Though the exact cause of the fever remains unknown, researchers believe that a particular personality, combines with the energy generated by a range of Wesleyan activities, academic, athletic, social, and spiritual, producing the reaction that, in this study, has been labeled Wesleyan fever.

The nature of the fever is also difficult to discuss in precise terms, since the fever manifests itself differently in different subjects. Researchers can only say that, thus far, all behaviors symptomatic of the fever are positive and seem to contribute to Wesleyan community's well being.
